According to a report from the Herald Sun, the casino recently alerted the authorities that a foreign high roller had hacked into the security surveillance system and made away with over $30 million. The report alleges that the scammer used the casino's own surveillance system against it to assist in orchestrating the heist. In the report from ABC, Deakin University Professor Linda Hancock said that it appeared an employee from Crown worked with the main perpetrator to carry out the robbery. It was not disclosed how many people may be involved in the robbery or which casino games were involved, and no names have been released. ABC has confirmed that the Victoria Police are involved in the investigation. Get all the latest PokerNews updates on your social media outlets.
