Regardless of whether you're betting on a traditional 5-day test match or a T-20 clash from the Indian IPL you'll be able to find a whole range of exciting live wagers that include batsman markets, run markets, first man out, next man out, next method of dismissal and dozens more.

With its origins being traced back to 16th century Tudor England, cricket is one of the oldest team games still in existence.

In other words, they lose their ability to "analyze" for a while and let their excitement take control.

In short, there is no single best live betting strategy and nothing is guaranteed.

So, a live arbitrage betting strategy is a combination of both.

A similar type of speculative live betting over/under market is the one on the number of corners, perhaps the most exciting type of in-play wagering.

As a rule of thumb, it is recommended to bet on a higher number of cards when rival teams go head to head in matches of critical importance.

There are just as many markets available prior to kickoff as once the game has started, but unlike Betfair they don't have a live streaming service.
